

The conference welcomes papers from post-graduates and early career researchers in a variety of disciplines that focus on archaeological textiles and textile working recognised. Increased textile research has demonstrated that there is a great potential in its capacity to elucidate many aspects of past cultures such as economy, technology, trade, foreign contact, religion, and fashion. Over the past two decades, several important developments have taken place leading to a more integrated approach and to new exciting collaborations between different disciplines. This has enabled us to further our understanding of how textile products have been made and perceived.

The present conference will focus on new discoveries as well as on studies of previously published materials using new methods. This conference aims to reflect on the advancements made by textile research contributing to the ongoing debate on the

We particularly welcome papers discussing various aspects of textile research, such as:

Those who would like to present a paper at the conference are kindly requested to submit an abstract (max. 200 words) to the organisers at textile@liverpool.ac.uk no later than 14th of September. The length of the proposed paper should not exceed 15-20 minutes. Please include your name, affiliation, and contact information at the Registration for the conference is free but required. Details to follow. Lunch and refreshments will be provided for all those attending.

We look forward to hearing from you!

If you have any questions regarding participation, please do not hesitate to contact the organisers: Alistair Dickey, Gabriella Longhitano, and Sarah Hitchens at textile@liverpool.ac.uk.